At common law, criminal conversation, often abbreviated as crim. con., is a tort arising from adultery. "Conversation" is an old euphemism for sexual intercourse that is obsolete except as part of this term. It is similar to breach of promise, a tort involving a broken engagement against the betrothed, and alienation of affections, a tort action brought by a spouse against a third party, who interfered with the marriage relationship. These torts have been abolished in most jurisdictions. The tor

One of the defenses to a claim for criminal conversation is the statute of limitations. In North Carolina, a complaint alleging criminal conversation needs to be filed within three years of the adulterous activity. If the complaint is not filed within three years, a plaintiff loses his or her opportunity to seek damages from the third party.
