Crossing the Threshold of Hope. A happy combination of question and answer, this book has been a best seller. We get a sense of informality as Vittorio Messori—chosen because of his previous writing and because he is a believer—asks the questions and John Paul II answers in words intended to be understood. Always articulate, the Pope responds to questions one by one: How does the Pope pray?

A door that each of us possesses within us. One that may not always be easy to find, but one that is always worth searching for. And when we finally do find it, when we reach for the handle and take our first step forward, we finally see that our satisfaction comes not in crossing the threshold, but in the journey it took to get there. Craig Miller
