High in the Clouds is a children's adventure novel written by musician/songwriter Paul McCartney and Philip Ardagh, illustrated by Geoff Dunbar, and published by Faber and Faber in October 2005. As writer/producer and animator/director, McCartney and Dunbar had collaborated on the 1984 animated film Rupert and the Frog Song, and High in the Clouds was scripted and sketched for several years by the two of them as another film. When the characters' home, Woodland, is attacked by human development,

Directed by Timothy Reckart. A squirrel embarks on a journey to find an animal sanctuary.

High in the Clouds - IMDb

High in the Clouds overall is a funny tale that will somehow delight young audiences. Although I did enjoy Geoff Dunbar's peaceful nature imagery some of the animal drawings feel to some extent stiff, glossed over with skilled computer rendering and coloring.

High in the Clouds by Paul McCartney - Goodreads

High in the Clouds is a rich, meandering, often funny tale. While the illustrations feel somewhat wooden and the ending slightly pat, young audiences will delight in the clever wordplay and smartly-drawn comic characters like Alfredo, the weightlifting flea. The story abounds with literary references: an allusion to James Herriot's All Creatures Great and Small, a fat, bowler-hat-clad rat named Wackford (after the eponymous headmaster from Nicholas Nickleby), and an animal assembly scene ...
