Then one can follow that hum from the plug, into and out of each successive light socket, until at some place the hum fails. Then we have a bad bulb, or a bad connection, maybe just a poorly-seated bulb. The device I got a decade or so ago was helpful, but also relatively insensitive and tricky to use.

Your best bet: Interior wall color is the number one way to reflect natural light back into your room. Light Reflectance Value, or LRV, can range from 100 percent for pure white down to 0 percent for black. All colors in-between will have greater or lesser LRV. White is the brightest: Nothing is brighter than white.
