The Dardenne Brothers. There's nobody in Hollywood, indie cinema or around the globe that can match the Dardenne's realism work since the mid 90's. They exploded on the scene 1996 with La Promesse and they now have a stellar 5 films that have landed in the top 100 of their respective decade. Two top 500 all-time films is impressive, but the consistency of their work, the Dardenne trademark (social realism, allegorical grittiness, handheld cameras—a cinema verite style) is what
